Emerging market currencies may be subject to volatile price movements. Emerging market securities may also be subject to higher volatility and lower liquidity than non emerging market securities. The Underlying Fund will be concentrated in natural resources companies and as a result, may be more volatile than more broadly diversified funds. The Underlying Fund is hence exposed to the risks of concentration. You may suffer long periods of underperformance when the sector falls out of favour. The currency hedging that may be used to minimise the effect of currency fluctuations may not always be successful. Where a purchase involves a foreign exchange transaction, it may be subject to the fluctuations of currency values. The Underlying Fund may invest in assets denominated in any currency and currency exposure may not be hedged for the shares on offer in Singapore. In addition, the net asset value of the USD and EUR denominated Share Classes are not denominated in SGD. Accordingly, foreign currency exchange rate movements are likely to influence your returns, and you may be exposed to exchange rate risks.
